INDUSTRY OVERVIEW

Construction Industry

Construction is one of the most vital parts of a country's infrastructure and industrial development, and contributes more than 7% to the nation's GDP and 78% to the gross capital formation. It includes houses, offices, hospitals, schools, townships and other buildings; urban infrastructure, highways, roads, railways, ports, airports; power systems; irrigation and agriculture systems; telecommunications etc. As one of the basic drivers of socio-economic development of country, the construction industry accounts for about 40 per cent of the development investment during the past 50 years in India. This sector generates huge employment opportunities, and also helps other related industries grow with rapid pace. Apart from attracting semi skilled and skilled people, it also absorbs unskilled workers from rural areas. The significance of this comes to fore when you consider that the construction industry employs over 3 Crore people, accounting for over 16% of the working population.

Due to fiscal constraints, Government is increasing emphasis on participation of private sector in this field and projects are being carried out in public-private partnership as well as BOT (Build - Operate - Transfer) mechanism. Also some projects undertaken by Government like NHDP (National Highway Development Programme) and PMGSY (Pradhan Mantri Gram Sadak Yojana) are providing necessary momentum to rapid growth of this industry.

Real Estate Sector

The Real Estate Industry has undergone a tremendous change over the last couple of years. After weathering a series of testing challenges, the industry has virtually re-invented itself and today sports a far more matured business model that is in line with the needs of today's marketplace.

The good part is that while challenges abound, the future looks very strong and promising indeed. As long as the focus stay on offering the right products, quality and price mix along with timely deliveries, players such as your company are almost assured of long term growth and wealth creation.

The scenario today is strong enough to be realistically optimistic, all thanks to the healthy fundamentals of the Indian real estate sector which is particularly being reflected in smoother liquidity and a resurgence of demand in the real estate sector. If the industry players manage to restructure their operations as per the new realities, success will not be very hard to find now. In light of this, measures such as de-leveraging and reallocating the proportion of commercial and residential development may be necessary for some players in order to adapt and succeed in the new scenario.

While there are firm signs of revival happening in the residential real estate segment, the same cannot be said for the commercial real estate sector, which is besieged with dropping demand and a supply glut. Apart from the over-supply, another key reason was the corporate under-scaling that one saw during the slowdown of 2008, as well as factors such as a below normal hiring level within the IT and ITES sectors, the prime drivers of commercial real estate. According to industry reports, the cumulative take-up across seven major cities had risen 42 per cent in the January-March quarter this year compared to the preceding quarter while new supply had declined 30 per cent year-on-year. While a few large deals have returned to the marketplace, the situation will take some time to get back in shape. Same is the case on the retail segment, which is also facing an increasing oversupply.

Therefore, a matured handling of the residential real estate sector is crucial to the fortune of the entire industry. It would be important not to get greedy with the demand resurgence and increase prices, as this could not only mute the upswing but also create a second bubble in the housing sector - a move that would hurt everyone without exception. So what is required is through homework and planning on the part of the developers as well as realistic demand forecasting to ensure that the good times carry on.

A. BUSINESS OVERVIEW

With operations spanning purchase, development, construction as well as trading, the Company has a far reaching presence across a wide spectrum of the real estate industry.

Similarly, the housing space is also in huge demand in the Mumbai, making it the real estate hotbed. The demand surge in this segment is also driven by the high immigration level that is characteristic of the region. . This calls for a huge set-up in terms of road, residential, commercial and industrial projects.

The company is very well positioned to benefit from these developments and is assuming a larger and more prominent role across various activities pertaining to the real estate industry.
