Need specific incentives for services sectors: Exporters

SEPC says travel, tourism and hospitality sectors need govt support

SHREYA NANDI
New Delhi, 23 February

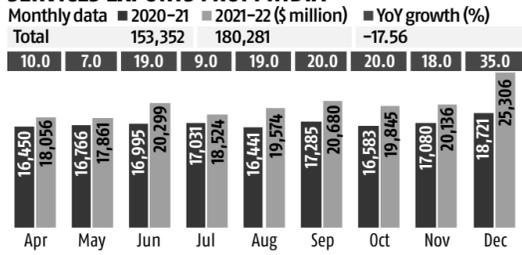

The government is likely to look into the services industry's demand for sector-specific incentives for exporters, especially the travel, tourism and hospitality sectors that have been badly hit since the outbreak of the pandemic two years ago.

Sunil H Talati, chairman, Services Exports Promotion Council (SEPC), told Business Standard that top officials from the department of commerce have asked the council to come up with sector-specific recommendations, as not all sectors would require support. The government also made it clear that no incentives will be given to the IT sector as its growth is already on an upswing.

"The government has asked for sector-wise suggestions (incentives), regarding why they want, how much they want and the justification. We have asked various sectors to assimilate the data and suggestions," Talati said, adding that the SEPC will submit recommendations to the government by the end of the month. Apart from travel and tourism, the suggestions will include sectors such as education, legal, medical, accounting and finance. The industry's demand comes in the backdrop of the government's ambitious $1 trillion services exports target by 2030 and lack of any fiscal incentives for services exports.

"If you want to achieve that (the target) there has to be special attention given to services sector exports. If not incentive, there is a need for urgent attention to tours and travel industry as it has been affected by the pandemic for two years now. If nothing else, give us a rebate in credit for GST (goods and services tax)," Talati said.

Last year, the SEPC had urged the government to rollout a new scheme - Duty Remission of Export of Services Scheme - to reimburse un-refunded taxes and duties embedded in services exports. The government, however, did not go ahead with the proposal.

Service Exports from India Scheme (SEIS) is the only central incentive scheme that has been rolled out in six years. However, the outlay for it was drastically cut over the years and, according to Talati, the government has also made it clear that the scheme will be discontinued.

The services sector is a key driver of India's economic growth, provides employment to nearly 26 million people and contributes approximately 40 per cent to India's total exports.

Services exports have totalled $180.28 billion during the first three quarters of the current fiscal, up 17 per cent year on year. The target for FY22 is $250 billion.

'We shouldn't restrict our ability to respond'

JAYANTH R VARMA, the external member of the Reserve Bank of India's Monetary Policy Committee (MPC), says he doesn't think monetary policy is ineffective when inflation is driven by supply-side forces. Varma, the only dissenting member of the MPC, tells Manojit Saha why he has not voted for maintaining the RBI's accommodative stance in the last four policies. Edited excerpts:

With growth yet to revive on a durable basis and inflation expected to come down sharply from the current level, what is the main reason for your voting against the accommodative stance?

There is a very high degree of uncertainty on both inflation and growth and I see the risks as being balanced on both sides. In such a situation, it is imperative that the policy stance should be neutral. I am not objecting to keeping rates low today, but I do think it is imprudent to commit to keeping rates low in future as well. We should not tie our hands behind our back and restrict our ability to respond to the growth and inflation shocks that may arise.

Can you throw some light on why you said 'the continued harping on combating the ill effect of the pandemic has become counterproductive'?

With the pandemic behind us, monetary policy has to go back to dealing with the slowdown of the business cycle that began in 2019 (if not earlier). The critical issue is understanding where we are on this cycle. Are we on the cusp of a cyclical growth recovery or are we going to remain in the trough for an extended period? Similarly, is inflation a transient phenomenon or is it longer lasting? This requires deep analytical thinking, but the continued focus on the pandemic deflects attention away from these difficult questions, and encourages a status quo bias.

In the minutes, you said 'fan charts also reveal a very large range of uncertainty on both inflation and growth'. What is your view on the fact that all the

THE UKRAINE SITUATION IS A SHOCK BOTH TO GROWTH AND TO INFLATION, AND IT IS TOO EARLY TO SAY WHICH OF THESE TWO SHOCKS WILL BE BIGGER

MPC members unanimously accept RBI's inflation projection?

For me (and I speak only for myself here), the main takeaway from the fan chart is not the point forecast of 4.2 per cent or 4.5 per cent, but the huge width of the fan chart. The uncertainty is so large that point forecasts are not very meaningful. The difference between the RBI forecasts and the more hawkish forecasts that I have seen from analysts is much less significant than one may think, because the confidence bands of these apparently divergent forecasts overlap quite a lot. In particular, the risk of inflation going beyond even the upper tolerance band is non-trivial even under the RBI forecasts.

With the pandemic behind us, monetary policy has to go back to dealing with the slowdown of the business cycle that began in 2019. The critical issue is understanding where we are on this cycle eral price level. Currently, supply shocks are affecting goods more than services. Changes in relative prices that make services cheaper help shift demand away from scarce goods to abundant services, and thereby rebalance the economy. There is no reason at all why this should cause a change in inflation.

What is the range of positive real interest rates you will be comfortable with?

That depends on the growth and inflation outcomes, and I am unwilling to quantify that more precisely at this stage.

Geopolitical tensions have deepened with Russia invading Ukraine. Does it change your views?

My statement began by noting that geopolitical tensions are now more important than the pandemic, and so these developments do not necessitate any change in my views. The Ukraine situation is a shock both to growth and to inflation, and it is too early to say which of these two shocks will be bigger.

Do you think monetary policy is completely ineffective if the sources of inflation are from the supply side?

Not at all. Supply shocks should lead to shifts in relative prices, and the job of monetary policy is to prevent these from affecting the gen-

Gencos to be penalised for low coal stock

Ministry notifies new coal stocking norms; gencos to abide by month-wise threshold

SHREYA JAI
New Delhi, 24 Feb

Thermal power generating companies (gencos) that do not maintain adequate coal stock will face penalty, which includes reduction in fixed charge of the tariff they levy from power distribution companies (discoms).

The Union Ministry of Power notified new coal stocking norms that require gencos to maintain adequate stock of coal to avoid any crisis during lean coal supply months.

The penalty will be computed based on the shortfall - wherein the fixed charge will be reduced to the extent of shortfall in normative availability of coal.

The ministry in its notice has tabulated month-wise stock to be maintained by pithead (near coal mines) and non-pithead (away from mines) plans. For pithead, the stock ranges from 12-17 days and for non-pithead 20-26 days.

The power plants have been instructed to maintain adequate stock during the fourth quarter to balance their coal need during the monsoon months, when coal supply dips.

The notice also said gencos will be graded on a monthly basis on their performance and status of payment to the coal companies.

Gencos to be fined for selling in open market without consent

The Union Ministry of Power in a gazette notification said gencos will be penalised if they sell contracted power in the open market without the consent of the buyer. "In case the seller fails to offer the contracted power as per the agreement to the procurer and sells this power without procurer's consent to any other party, the procurer shall be entitled to claim damages from the seller for an amount equal to the higher of twice the tariff as per the PPA," said the notification.
